

OPEN CALL: Science and Industry Museum Late: arts and health (working title)

The Science and Industry Museum is looking for researchers, practitioners, artists and performers working on the connection between the arts and health to support the delivery of a Late at the museum on Wednesday 6 March.

What are Lates?

Our Lates are social and informal adults-only events that take place after hours (7pm-10pm) with hands-on activities, TED style talks and a bar. Professionals from across the country take part in an exciting and innovative programme delivered to 500-1000 young adult visitors. It's a great opportunity to engage and inspire a new audience in your work.

What are we looking for?

We're looking for interactive activities, creative projects and short performances that showcase exciting contemporary projects and research into arts and health. We're also looking for practitioners of different art forms used for mindfulness and wellbeing who would be willing to run short workshops.

I'm interested. What do I do now?

If you have an activity, workshop or demonstration that you think might suit this event, please get in touch by Monday 4 February.

Please circulate this call out to anyone in your networks that you think might be interested in taking part.

If you have any questions or would like to discuss how you could take part, please contact Georgina Wells, the Contemporary Science Programme Coordinator:
